Dangerous Question. In court martial trials in our army, says an officer on duty in the state, the officers are selected from the officers at the post, without reference to their level training or their ability to handle a case.

A prime surgeon whose abstracts of law was complete, found himself appointed counsel for the defense of the one and when he entered the court, his only legal knowledge was that he had a right to object to the tactics of the other side. When the judge one of the witnesses was placed under cross-examination the lawyer began to his feet and started shouting: "Objection!"

"On what grounds" demanded the prosecuting attorney.

"On what grounds" repeated the attorney. "On the very good grounds. Why, if my witness tells the truth when he answers that question it will ruin my case!"
